

How clean are your hands?

When did you last wash your hands?

Were you thorough?

Correct hand washing techniques are essential when handling food and chemicals. We may not all be doing open heart surgery but dirty hands can still destroy a company.

Do we know how to wash our hands thoroughly? After all, it was something we were taught when we were knee high and we have had years of experience!

Most people actually don't know how to thoroughly wash their hands. There are some parts of our hands that are holiday resorts for germs with no risk of disturbance.

Glitterbug is a very quick and easy way to test and demonstrate effective hand washing. You simply rub it on before washing your hands and all missed areas appear bright white under a UV light.

Glitterbug is ideal for training for HACCP, safety and personal hygiene.

Glitterbug provides a fast and easy test.

What is a Glitterbug?

Glitterbug is a lotion that is rubbed into a person's hands before washing. After washing, any remaining Glitterbug will show up as bright white under a UV light.

Powder now available

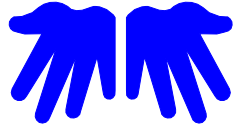

Glitterbug Powder is an excellent method to show how easily germs can be transferred. The powder is not absorbed like the lotion and so is easily passed from hands to objects and onto other people.
